welcome

from the curator
Genevieve Lacey

Ngeringa's a place where the tissue between outside and inside worlds feels easily permeable.

It's a place you're keenly aware of the shifting light.

Being in Ngeringa's landscape made me wonder what it might feel like to trace the moods of a day and a night in music.

What you'll experience this weekend is the collective creation of the group of generous, imaginative people who have gathered around this place and this question. What's emerged is entirely collaborative. The idea of charting light's temperament in sound has encouraged us to think about combining elements in particular ways. It's helped frame our conversations, and given us a kind of emotional architecture for the weekend.

It's the first time many of us have worked together. It's been joyful, stimulating. It's revealed clues to projects we haven't yet begun. It's given us space to open our senses, and ways into our own circadian rhythms through music, poetry and film.

It's extraordinary to be given the gift of a venue for a weekend, with the invitation to programme it, however you like.

We're rapt that you've joined us – thank you for coming.

from the founder
Ulrike Klein

The Ngeringa Cultural Centre has opened the door to a world of new possibilities. It stands proudly on the earth and inspires our imagination to soar. When I'm facing the stage looking out over the land, anything seems possible.

For me Ngeringa 24 takes us into new territory where we place our trust in one outstanding artist and invite them to create something truly unique. By giving them the freedom to collaborate with artists of their choosing, we enter their creative world. For our first Ngeringa 24, I am delighted to have Genevieve Lacey as our curator. She is an extraordinary musician who crosses all boundaries from the ancient to the new, to the unborn which she improvises live!

I'm sure what we are about to experience will be rich and deeply rewarding, but for me the real joy is not knowing what to expect. What will I learn? What will I hear that I've never heard before? Will I come away with a new and different perspective on music? These are conversations I hope to have with you and the artists over the weekend as we listen, share good wine and local produce and immerse ourselves in nature, music, art and literature.

Umberto Clerici

Cello

Umberto Clerici began studying cello when he was five with Antonio Mosca. Later he attended the classes of Mario Brunello, David Geringas and Steven Isserlis. In 2007 he was awarded a Soloist Diploma from Augsburg and Nurnberg University, from the class of Julius Berger.

A prizewinner in many international competitions (including the Janigro Competition in Zagreb and the Rostropovich Competition in Paris), Umberto is the only Italian cellist other than Mario Brunello to have won a prize at the renowned Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow (2011).

Umberto debuted at the age of 17, playing Haydn's D Major cello concerto in Japan, and from 2002 began a fully-fledged solo career with an array of renowned orchestras, including St. Petersburg Philharmonic, Philharmonia Wien, Brighton Philharmonic, Russian State Orchestra of Moscow, I Pomeriggi Musicali (Milan), Zagreb Philharmonic, ORT-Orchestra della Toscana (Florence), State Orchestras of Istanbul and Ankara, collaborating with conductors like Alexander Dmitriev, Aldo Ceccato, Christoph Poppen, Lu Jia, Dimitri Sitkovetzki, Barry Wordsworth, Ola Rudner and Lukas-Peter Graf.

Umberto has performed as soloist at some of the most prestigious concert halls including Carnegie Hall, Musikverein, Shostakovich Hall and Auditorium Parco della Musica. In 2003 he debuted at the Salzburg Festival and in 2012 he performed Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations with the Orchestra of the Teatro Regio in Turin conducted by Valery Gergiev.

He has recorded the first Saint-Saens cello concerto and pieces for cello and orchestra by Tchaikovsky and Shostakovich.

In 2014 Umberto was appointed as Principal Cello of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra and for four years, he was principal cello at the Teatro Regio in Turin. He is Cello Lecturer at the Sydney Conservatorium and in the summer at the Salzburg Mozarteum University.

Sera Davies
Filmmaker, Director and Cinematographer

For Ngeringa 24, Umberto plays a new cello crafted by renowned luthier Loeiz Honorè in Cremona, 2015 and a cello crafted by G.B. Guadagnini c. 1743, Piacenza, known as the 'Ngeringa'. This cello is currently on loan to Sharon Draper, cellist of the Australian String Quartet. She has kindly made it available to Umberto for this weekend.
